Summer Course

The Challenges of Illicit trades in the Mediterranean Area

The Summer Course on "The Challenges of Illicit trades in the Mediterranean Area" is part of the third year activities of the Jean Monnet Centre of Excellence EUMoSIT, granted by the European Union and managed by a team of the Department of Law of University of Palermo (<https://www.unipa.it/dipartimenti/di.gi./progetti/eumosit/>).

INTRODUCTION - KEY CONCEPT

Freedom of mobility still represents the most coveted factor of globalization: goods and services are freely traded worldwide; people, information and money unstoppably move from one country to another. The uncontrolled exercise of this unprecedented amount of freedoms may turn the opportunities of globalization into the breeding ground for the growth of certain organised criminal activities – such as human trafficking and smuggling of counterfeit goods. This is undeniable at the southern borders of the EU, which has now become the dark gate to the attractive European market, offering the chance to criminal organizations to accumulate enormous illicit proceeds.

The Summer course intends to offer a broad-spectrum perspective, which will allow participants to better understand the interactions between the freedom to mobility, of persons and goods, and the underlying security issues to strike a fair balance between the involved values. The topic of the illicit trades in the Mediterranean Sea will be addressed with a multidisciplinary approach and it will be divided into three main research areas, such as: a) trafficking of migrants; b) trafficking of hazardous waste; c) illicit circulation of cultural property.

THEMES AND OBJECTIVES

The Summer Course aims at investigating the dynamics of the illicit trades in the Mediterranean Sea and their relevant connection with the security issue and the freedom to mobility, of persons and goods. In particular, the course will focus on the following aspects:

- (1) Crimmigration policies and their compatibility with the principles governing criminal law;
- (2) Criminal relevance of the so called “humanitarian smuggling”;
- (3) Criminal and procedural criminal law policies against transnational criminal phenomena such as illegal waste trafficking and trafficking in cultural goods.

METHODOLOGY

Two sessions of three hours each will be held every day, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. In order to stimulate a more active participation, the end of each session will be devoted to the debate, aimed at developing and deepening the topics introduced and discussed during the seminars.

Scientific-disciplinary sectors

The scientific-disciplinary sectors involved are IUS / 08; IUS / 13, IUS / 14, IUS / 16, IUS / 17, IUS / 20.

LANGUAGES

The seminars will be held in Italian and English

RECIPIENTS OF THE SUMMER COURSE AND ADMISSION PREREQUISITES

The recipients of the Summer Course, in accordance with the University Regulations, are graduate students according to the regulations in force prior to Ministerial Decree no. 509/99; three-year degree or specialist degree pursuant to Ministerial Decree no. 509/99; bachelor's degree or master's degree pursuant to Ministerial Decree no. 270/2004, and therefore also doctoral students, research doctors, postdocs, those who have achieved a I and II level Master, who are interested in the subject and are able to orient themselves within the disciplines involved in the course. There are 100 places available, and at least 50 will be selected among those who have obtained the degree from another University. If the number of places referred to in the reserve provided for
